Subject: RE: BLRR v City of Buffalo

As I previously indicated, my understanding of this process is to narrow down IAD files to eliminate what is clearly not responsive to your demands, not determine relevancy. I've reiterated that a few times now.

With respect to the files you have identified, I note that the phrases "traffic stop", "tickets", and "summons" often refer to instances other than "checkpoints". They are also not limited to housing and/or strike force. Is it your position that all traffic stops/moving violations/tickets/ summonses files should be turned over? That would appear to go beyond the scope of your complaint.

Also, we generally object to complaints that are not sustained. Law v. Cullen, 613 F.Supp. 259, 262 (S.D.N.Y., 1985) (unsubstantiated civilian complaints merely charges, not actual findings of abuse); see also Hart v. Goord, 2010 WL 1644242 (W.D.N.Y., 2010) (No. 08CV681) (denying discovery of grievances against corrections officer found to be unsubstantiated, with its probative value being quite limited). If you disagree, it might be helpful to briefly explain your position why.

I believe that what, if any, parts of the IAD files are discoverable depends on the particular file, the nature of the allegations, whether the complaint was sustained, and how many, if any, files the Court orders to be turned over, among other things. We have raised overbroad and burdensome objections to your requests and, along with relevancy, etc.. Beyond responsiveness, it seems that there could be some balancing of what is ordered turned over and how many files are searched, that may have to be undertaken. See generally, Ashford v. Goord, 2009 WL 2086838 (W.D.N.Y., 2009) (request seeking all grievances and complaints filed against defendants was overly broad); Melendez v. Falls, 2010 WL 811337 (W.D.N.Y., 2010) (request seeking all grievances and complaints filed against defendants was overly broad). As we have discussed, I believe 50a prohibits me from disclosing much of what is contained within these files so that would also have to be addressed. There are different ways Courts have addressed this, and, it often depends on what is turned over. To help facilitate this discussion/resolution, I've attempted to give a general summary of IAD files contents below.

Generally speaking, the IAD files I have reviewed are contained within a paper file folder. Within the file folder there is often a Case Index, which basically is a table of contents. There can also be an IAD File Checklist, which includes categories of documents and information that may or may not be applicable to each case. There is often a Case Summary generally describing the complaint, investigation, witnesses, actions taken by investigator. There can also be a separate IAPro Case Summary which has similar information and appears to be printed from the IAPro system. If the file is closed there is generally a Disposition with a determination about the actions and allegations. Generally, there is a form with several different determinations, "sustained", "exonerated", "not sustained", "unfounded", "conference", "dismissed", or "other". If there was a complainant there is often a closing letter to that individual. There is not always a "complaint form" completed by an individual complainant, as it appears these IAD files can be open in a number of ways. Generally, most of each file consists of reports, statements, photos, and other documents somehow related to the investigations. How related those documents are to the facts at issue vary widely. There are often personnel records and other documents generated for the evaluation of officers performance and continued employment. The size of the files vary greatly, as do the contents of the investigation, as often there are records, statements, actions which are appropriate in one case and not another. There can be files with multiple folders and files with only a small number of documents in a single folder. What documents are included also varies.

Let me know if you have any questions. Apologize if any of this is unclear, I unexpectedly have to leave to attend to some unfortunate home ownership issues, but will be around most of the day tomorrow if you'd like to discuss. Thanks.

Rob Quinn.

Attached are the Excel spreadsheets with the results of the searches you ran for each of the 8 search terms on IA Pro. In each spreadsheet, Plaintiffs have highlighted in yellow the complaints that we believe are responsive to our document requests, relevant to our claims and therefore should be produced to us. Please confirm that you will be providing your views on which of these complaints are relevant by next Monday, July 29.

In addition, it remains Plaintiffs' position that the entire case file for each of the relevant IA complaints should be produced to us, and we similarly look forward to hearing your views on this issue by July 29 as well.

Again, we agree on the dates and steps discussed and specifically outlined in our conference. Nothing in the email I just sent changes that, as I said 2 times (for that extra emphasis). I noted my disagreement with the characterization/argument/language set forth in your email in what I thought was a pretty straight forward manner. I don't think this additional email was necessary. I'm going to proceed exactly as we discussed. I don't see the point in wasting the court's time, and will reiterate all of this if you want to.

In a further effort to make it clear why I do not think this is an actual dispute, my specific responses are contained in the body of your email. Apologize for any typographical errors, tried to respond quickly.

My direct extension is (716) 851-4326 if any of this, or my prior email, was unclear.

Do you at least agree with steps 1 through 3(b) as I have outlined them (I agree with the steps I proposed and we discussed, and which the numbered steps generally reflect if you take away the characterization and argument. I don't think we're deciding relevancy, and I don't think the only two options are all or portions of the IAD files. Everyone is reserving arguments, we're just trying to narrow issues, which probably will have to be presented to the court, as contemplated by these steps, with the slight distinction about an in camera)? Because if not, then we (plaintiffs) do not see the point of continuing with this process and would rather just go to the court for rulings on (1) which IA complaints are relevant and thus must be produced to plaintiffs (I think this what we are trying to get to, the point was to narrow that so as not to burden the court and waste anyone's time), since, as we and the court have already said, 50a in no way bars discovery of relevant materials in a federal civil rights litigation (I think you're conflating 50a with relevancy so not sure how to respond to this, but I reiterate my objection to you continuously bringing up 50a as a straw man), and (2) whether plaintiffs are entitled to all or part of the files for the relevant IA complaints (again, this is essentially what we are trying to get to, point was to get a better idea of the materials and narrow the issues).

As you know, we requested these IA materials 8 months ago and tried to resolve any potential 50a concerns with you 9 months ago, which you were totally unwilling to do (and in fact said it was not necessary at that time) (This is rhetoric and not accurate. I've stated my position to you on 50a countless times, including options on how it is generally and can be specifically resolved). Steps 1 to 3 as we have outlined them (and which we thought you agreed to on our call today) (I agreed to what was discussed on our call today, and disagreed with the characterization put in your email, which is exactly what my email says and is reiterated here) are designed precisely to narrow down the universe of complaints that the court would have to deal with in resolving your objections to our discovery requests (on this, we can agree).

So please indicate whether you agree with Steps 1 through 3 as I have outlined them (I agree to what we discussed and which these steps generally reflect with the objections to the characterization/argument/language I've outlined).

Dates are what we discussed. Characterization is off, unnecessary, and appears to be an attempt to make arguments. This in no way affects what I told you we would do, or what I expect you will do, but I'll address it in an attempt to clarify, expedite, and hopefully avoid future disputes.

As I stated, don't think we are determining relevancy at this point. We are also not conceding you would be entitled to any portions of the IAD files, at this point, and we have raised objections to that effect. This process is designed to get everyone to the point where we can narrow the materials, have a better idea of the universe of documents, and concisely present to the court as needed, with the opportunity to make all available arguments, and ultimately to move forward with a clearer idea of the issues in a reasonable manner.

The in camera process is dependent on too many things to decide for certain at this point, most significant being the court's time and discretion, but absolutely would be something to discuss and consider with all the other issues after we narrow down the number of "complaints" and have a better idea of the burden and materials.

Again, none of this impacts or changes the proposals we discussed in any way. Let me know if you have any questions, but hopefully this is pretty straight forward. Thanks.

Great, thanks for letting us know.

Also, we just wanted to make sure we're on the same page about what the process will be moving forward on the IA complaint discovery. Please let us know if this accurately reflects what we discussed on the phone earlier today:

1. Today to Tomorrow- Rob sends Excel spreadsheet with the summaries of the 180 "Traffic Stop" IA complaints
2. Wed, 7/24- Plaintiffs send the list of IA complaints from each of the Excel Spreadsheets that we believe are relevant to our claims
3. Mon, 7/29-
 - (a) Rob indicates which of the IA complaints that Plaintiffs flagged as relevant do Defendants agree are relevant and which do defendants do not think are relevant
 - (b) Rob indicates whether Plaintiffs are entitled to (i) the entire case file for each relevant IA complaint OR (ii) only certain portions and identifies those portions of the case files which Plaintiffs are not entitled to and why
4. Thereafter, parties will submit to the Court all of the complaints that the parties agree are relevant as well as those that there is dispute over relevance. We will ask the Court to conduct in camera review of those complaints for which there is a dispute over relevance to determine which are relevant and must be produced to plaintiffs. In addition, if there is a dispute over which portions of the case files of each relevant IA complaint must be produced to plaintiffs, the parties will make our respective arguments in support of our respective positions to the Court and ask the Court to rule on the issue. The Court may at its own discretion review the IA complaints that the parties already agree are relevant, but we will not ask the Court to conduct that in camera review.

Okay, looking forward to your response tomorrow, and then please let us know when this week you would be available to discuss what the next step is, as we are quite eager to complete the production of the responsive IA files since our request for them has been pending since November. And, will you also be providing the results of the IA Pro search for "Traffic Stop" tomorrow? Finally, if 329 IA "Traffic" files are too many for you to review, could you instead provide us with an Excel chart with all 329 of the short complaint summary narratives, and then we can go through and identify the ones that we think are potentially responsive/relevant, which are very likely going to be much less than 329?

Thanks for sending these. We had a few follow-up questions and requests:

1. When you say that there were too many non-responsive traffic entries, exactly how many entries were there? As you recall from the May 30 Court conference, the Judge specified that if the IA Pro search came up with 200 or less hits, Defendants are obligated to review all of those complaint files to identify those that are responsive. So if the "traffic" query generated 200 or less entries, you are required to review all of those and to send us the list of those that are responsive. So we ask that you confirm by Monday that you will do so.

2. Would Defendants be willing to run an IA Pro query for "Traffic Stop"?

3. We now want to get clarity from you on what you envision to be the next step in the process of producing the responsive IAD complaint files to us. You have mentioned several times on prior meet-and-confer phone calls and during the May 30 Court conference that 50-a requires the Court to review the files in camera and then issue an order directing you to produce the relevant ones to us. Are we now at the stage where the complaints listed in each of the Excel spreadsheets can be submitted to the Court for in camera review? If yes, then we ask that you tell us by Monday the date when you will be ready to submit them for in camera review. If you do not think we are yet at the stage of in camera review, then please tell us by Monday what else you think needs to happen before you will be ready to submit the files to the Court for in camera review.

It is Plaintiffs' view that every one of the Housing and Strike Force Monthly and Daily Reports from 2013 to the present contains relevant/discoverable information, namely (1) the charts on the first page of the reports that tabulate the quantity of traffic tickets issued and traffic arrests made by Housing and Strike Force officers on a daily and monthly basis, and (2) the narratives on the subsequent pages of the reports that discuss particular locations where checkpoints and other traffic enforcement activities (e.g. vehicle stops, vehicle searches, traffic tickets, traffic misdemeanor arrests) were conducted and why those activities were conducted at those locations. Thus, it is Plaintiffs' position that all of the charts and all of the checkpoint and other traffic enforcement-related narratives contained in each and every Monthly and Daily Housing and Strike Force report from 2013 to the present must be produced to us. We would accept redactions of all non-traffic and non-checkpoint-related narratives- in addition to the redactions of personal identifying information of witnesses, victims, informants and suspects and information concerning ongoing BPD investigations that we previously proposed. We also want to note that, in our view, redactions of personal identifying information does NOT include redactions of demographic information such as a person's race, age, or gender.

Please let us know by close of business today if this proposal is acceptable to you. If we do not get confirmation from you that our proposal is acceptable to Defendants, we intend to move the Court to compel production of the Housing and Strike Force Monthly and Daily Reports

> Rob, we are available to speak Monday at 3pm. On that call we will expect to discuss all the issues raised in our letter of June 20.

> In terms of your production, as of this writing we have received nothing from you. Our instructions specify to produce electronically or by hand-delivery to the Western New York Law Center, and if you had produced documents "a few days ago" as you assert, we should have them in hand by now.

> In terms of the costs of production, there is absolutely no rationale for cost-shifting for a simple search of your own emails. Zubulake v. UBS Warburg LLC, 217 F.R.D. 309 (S.D.N.Y. 2003). If some of the searches have produced an unreasonably large number of hits, that is something we can discuss. Please provide us with a list of the searches you would like to modify along with the hit count per custodian. Please provide this information in writing before the call.

I am available most of the day on Monday. We sent out partial responses a few days ago, I hoped to have more but we are unfamiliar with this process and it's taking much longer than expected. I'll try to respond tonight or early tomorrow, apologize but I am in a mediation with the court that's going much longer than expected.
